LIEU LANDS.

As some misapprehension appears to exist in regard to "lieu lands," we will give a brief explanation of the subject. The class which we will now speak of are those which were taken in lieu of the sixteenth and thirty-sixth sections of public lands which were donated to the State of California by the United States for school purposes. When these happened to be located upon confirmed grants, the State had the privilege of selecting other land belonging to the United States in lieu of said sections. The State located many sections in lieu of the sixteenth and thirty-sixth sections which fell on unconfirmed grants, some of which, like the San Jacinto, were rejected, consequently those lieu lands revert to the United States and are subject to pre-emption, the State being obliged to take the original lands located on such unconfirmed grants. The lands taken in lieu of the school lands falling on confirmed grants, or those subsequently confirmed, will probably be held by the State, or those holding under it. The lands taken in lieu of school or pre-empted lands located on railroad grants are subject to the same conditions.

LIEU LANDS.

On account of ill health Rev. A. M. Campbell has been granted one month of absence from his church.

MODERN INNOVATIONS.

Time was when precedents, both in legal practice and in politics, were regarded with some degree of veneration and possessed some value in popular estimation, and were considered as responsible indices in shaping future action. In our day and generation all traditional sanctities seem to have lost all their potency. Our forefathers were governed by a proper regard for the Constitution, and under its guidance proper legislation ensued and harmony prevailed. Those times of harmony have passed, and to-day under the shadow of a wreck the well-wishers of our country look back to the departed days with no small degree of regret. Not content with prostituting and mutilating the Constitution for political purposes, there is now a movement on foot to break down another landmark and confer upon our territories the privilege of electing all the home officers. No matter from what party the proposition emanates, it is unwise and fraught with danger. By enactment, the President, with the approval of the Senate, has been empowered to appoint both the executive and judicial heads of government in territories. Now, for some unaccountable reason, it is sought to do away with this long established custom and again take an unwise departure from the heretofore honored method. It is immaterial from which party such a proposition comes, and we trust that before the original act is repeated our members of Congress will give the matter a sober second thought. By this innovation no possible gain can be ensured. Until organized as States the territories are naturally in a condition of transition, and rightly should be under the control of the general government. The plan has worked well for a century, and no injustice has ensued to the Territories. A fair representation in Congress has always been guaranteed, and the entire machinery of Territorial government has worked smoothly. It is to be hoped that this innovation will not be made. No possible good can come from it, and much harm can be done. The factious wrangling of political schemers must necessarily ensue, and a proper development of social progress be retarded. Upon the acquisition of a proper population statehood ensues, and then all the proper privileges of the elective franchise legitimately follow. It is better to let well enough alone.

TO CORRECT AN EVIL.

There is not a community upon the coast that is not to a greater or less degree affected by the curse of the presence of the Chinese. All of our material interests, our social surroundings and our pecuniary welfare are most emphatically affected by the damaging influence of their being amongst us; and yet, while we deprecate the existence of such an element in our midst, we also most decidedly repudiate the action of the anti-Chinese clubs in San Francisco. This line of procedure, according to the telegraph, is of an inflammatory character, and if carried out is calculated to bring the reputation of our State into a condition of disrepute that will be sadly unenviable. There are legitimate means of abating nuisances and correcting evils, no matter how grievous; and illegitimate acts to accomplish a prospective good detracts from the value of the benefits sought to be attained. It does sound absolutely preposterous for any body of sane men to listen to, much less endorse the arguments used in San Francisco a few nights since in regard to this question. The real effect of carrying out the violent sentiments expressed at the club meetings would involve an insecurity to property of innocent parties throughout the city, covering a district Heaven only knows how extensive. The terrors of the wildest Communism in France would bear no comparison to the result of such a course. The strong arm of the executive authority of the State would necessarily be compelled to exercise its prerogative, and were the fanatical ideas of these organizations carried out we should witness such a scene of conflagration and carnage as the world has seldom beheld. That the presence of the Chinese among us is a positive curse no one can deny who studies the incidents of the hour the state over. It is an evil that the majority of our citizens everywhere wish to be rid of; but in the name of the honor of our State, and the respect we have for civilization, to rid ourselves of an evil let our people do nothing that will bring a reproach upon the fair fame of our commonwealth. Steps have been taken to bring this much vexed question before the government at Washington, and it is to be hoped that before the adjournment of Congress something will be done to aid our community in this regard. The only legitimate remedy lies with Congress, and upon our representatives in both branches is imposed the burden of faithfully representing the wishes of their constituents in regard to this matter. It is true that a treaty is as binding as a personal contract, yet either can be broken by a violent action on the part of the contracting parties, or by mutual consent. It is for the government to take either step and take the consequences. Either course is within its province, and in no wise lies in the power of any community to enforce its individual will by violence. Any illegitimate action on the part of any isolated community would be not only harmful but in the highest degree disgraceful. It is to be hoped that the organizations in San Francisco will take a sober second thought, and that discretion will rule their action. There is an element in every community where the Chinese exist that needs but the word to give vent to the strongest ebullition of passion, and when once let loose becomes uncontrollable. The laws provide means for the redress of all wrongs, and the abatement of nuisances. The example set by the citizens of Antioch is pernicious in the extreme, and offers a precedent that can but be condemned by all law abiding citizens. The torch and the bludgeon are not the instruments to secure reform or remedy evils of any sort.

GRANT AND THE HOUSE.

On the third of April the House of Representatives called upon General President GRANT to inform that body whether any acts of his or any of his duties have been performed at a distance from the seat of government established by law, etc. The motive of this action on the part of the House is plainly recognized. It is undoubtedly claimed by the House that many acts of the President have been performed in a manner wholly out of character and in a manner unbecoming the dignity of the Chief Magistrate. In response to the interrogatory of the House the President stands upon his dignity and virtually tells the august enquirers to mind their own business—that his movements are none of their concern. While it is true that most of our Presidents have during vacation of Congress indulged in recreation at some favorite watering place, none have adopted the system of migration that has characterized the career of President GRANT. From the beginning of the term of his office he has shown an undignified spirit, and has appeared to prefer the atmosphere of the stable and the pleasure of toadying to the aristocratic element at Long Branch and at fashionable resorts, receiving the treacherous homage of the sycophants who ever rejoice in fawning upon those in high places. It is evident that the House had impeached in view when the resolution of enquiry was adopted, but it is a question whether the undignified conduct of the President furnishes sufficient ground for the charge of malfeasance or misdemeanor. Yet in view of all precedent, and regarding the honor that should attach to the office of President, the House will be sustained by popular sentiment for administering a severe rebuke. We cannot admire the transformation of the traditional customs of our republic to those of the character of the court of Louis XIV. We are glad of the rebuke and trust it will be productive of good. The President stands or rather confesses that he occupies the position of a criminal on the stand when he remarks that if impeachment was contemplated he should not commit himself by a response. This is characteristic of the man and shows that he has an appreciation of his guilt. We hope the House will proceed.

BETWEEN four and six o'clock last evening there was a violent storm extending from Kansas to Chicago, which has so damaged the telegraph that our late dispatches failed to reach us.

A Political Banquet.

NEW YORK, May 6.—At the 10th Annual Banquet of the Chamber of Commerce, Attorney General Pierpont, in responding to a toast of the President of the United States, took occasion to make a campaign speech and to pay a fulsome eulogy on the character of Gen. Grant who has been characterized as a model of all that is great and good, and appealed to the commercial prosperity of New York to support the Republican party. He alluded to, though not by name, Gov. Tilden as an aspirant to the Presidential chair. Tilden, who attended the banquet, came late, but before the beginning of speeches,

In responding to the toast, "The State of New York," he alluded to his favorably hurled back Pierpont's charge that the Democracy of New York was responsible for the decay in the business of the metropolis.

"PUTS" AND "CALLS."

"PUTS" and "CALLS" are stocks sold by operators, for a premium signed at a distance from the market price, giving the holder of the privilege the right to close the contract at any time within the time named in the privilege. "PUTS" and "CALLS" are a simple, easy and expeditious method of making transactions in stocks. Nothing plainer or more readily comprehended could be devised. The great objection to the ordinary mode of buying and selling stocks is that it forces the customers to go through with a vast amount of tedious peripatetic and unnecessary labor. Margins are to be arranged, commissions are to be looked after, interest is to be stipulated, accounts current are to be rendered and statements to be analyzed.

"PUTS" and "CALLS" dispense with all this tedious and time-consuming routine, by the purchase of a simple and straightforward contract to do a certain thing; to assume a specified risk at a fair and equitable rate. The holder of such a contract has nothing further to do but to perform the simple duty of watching the stock quotations and electing when to bring his privilege to a settlement. All possibilities of error of intention or deception or overcharging are absolutely done away in operations based upon

There is no chance for them. The enormous profits in stock trading are demonstrated to holders of their privileges demonstrate the fact that more money is made by specializing in stocks by means of "PUTS" and "CALLS" than by any other manner.

MEDICINE; THIS SIDE UP.

A Pioneer Sketch.

BY ADOLPHUS PERKINS.

I think I have previously remarked that old Jerry was a placid, mild-mannered little man. You would hardly surmise from his general appearance that he had not followed one of the prosiest, matter-of-fact forms of existence outside the treadmill. He might be a church deacon or a retired country parson, or, indeed, for all you know, he might be the prophet Jeremiah himself, come back and called Jerry for convenience. But be assured he is nothing of the kind.

Rumor hath it that in his youthful days Jerry employed his best energies and the greater portion of his time in sowing wild oats. But notwithstanding the attention devoted to his agricultural pursuits in early life, Jerry's crop turned out a lamentable failure. I am pained to state, and it was this kind of industry which caused his departure for California in the days of 1849.

Like many others who tore themselves away from their homes in the East to seek the new El Dorado, Jerry left behind a wide circle of acquaintances who greatly regretted his departure. Among this number of his esteemed friends were the entire police force of the city of Boston. Jerry had heard that Jerry's voyage was hastened by an unlooked-for mishap which occurred about that time.

It seems that a certain handsome and chaste young lady, the daughter of a wealthy and influential judge, took a sudden fancy to Jerry, and asked his hand in marriage. This procedure was of course very singular, since the year one thousand eight hundred and forty-nine was not leap year, or indeed a season of any unusual social privileges. But what is still more singular, the young lady's father insisted strongly in uniting the two young people in the holy bonds of matrimony, and although Jerry courteously declined the honor thus urged upon him, the arm of the law was invoked to enforce his compliance.

For a week or more Jerry's friends, the police, were on a sharp lookout for him, but the little man kept studiously reserved, feeling a natural delicacy about being found in the company of such notorious personages. Finally one of the officers insisted upon forcing himself upon Jerry's company, and he was dismissed so summarily by our hero that he remained in bed for some time thereafter.

But meanwhile the city of Boston became too contracted for Jerry's field of operations and he longed for other worlds to conquer. Upon consulting his more immediate and disinterested friends the general decision was reached that he should go—but how?

It was much to be desired that his departure should be without show of ostentation, and above all, prove as little trouble as possible to the police.

The good ship Duxbury lay at Bagg's wharf ready freighted and bound for California. At the last moment before she weighed anchor an express wagon came thundering down the wharf loaded with a good sized box marked "G. Burdell, M. D., San Francisco, California, via ship Duxbury. MEDICINE. THIS SIDE UP." The express wagon drew up to the vessel. A tall gentleman, whom we at once determined to be Doctor Burdell, jumped from the seat and, with the aid of the truckman, lifted the box carefully down upon the ground. It was then hurried on board ship with other belated baggage, the Doctor superintending the proceeding personally, so great was his solicitude for the precious drugs within. His charge safely deposited on the deck of the vessel, the Doctor went away to look after his other baggage, and we would accompany him were it not for the various other matters which demand our attention in connection with the box of medicine which we have mentioned. There was a good representation of the police force of the city about the wharf and vessel. The officers moved constantly about from place to place, and seemed to be expecting something or somebody. What they really wanted, of course the writer of this history is not supposed to know. Finally, two of these uneasy officials approached the box of medicine, and one remarked in an audible voice:

"He might be in there."

"No," said the party addressed, "the box is too small."

"But he is a mighty little fellow," was the rejoinder.

"Then try it and see."

With this suggestion the first party stuck the end of his cane through a knot-hole in the side of the box and rammed away with it as though he were loading a piece of artillery. Had the medicines in the case been of a very fragile character they must certainly have been smashed, or had they been the villainous nitro-glycerine or dynamite invented in more modern times, they must as certainly have made a grand explosion. But the inquisitive officer finally withdrew his cane, regardless of the damage he might have done, and when his fellow inquired what he had discovered, he replied, "Only a bottle."

Then the Mate came along with a gang of deck hands, stowing away freight, and the box was rolled into a snug corner for convenience while the officers strolled away. I think the Mate and his men did not read the directions on the box, or else they were very stupid and careless, for instead of placing "this end up" as was marked plainly enough in big black letters, they put "this end down." Such a procedure only illustrates the careless manner in which our precious goods are handled by public carriers. I regret that there has been so little improvement in this respect of late years. As the vessel's moorings were that moment loosened, the ship put out with a great clamor, the tall doctor whom we have previously noted came up in an apparent flurry of excitement. When he saw that his box of medicine had been removed he was greatly disconcerted, and he seemed in much haste to search it out. Then when he had come to it he stooped down and whispered through the knot hole, "Are you all right, Jerry?" and a faint, weak whisper came back, "Yes, but standing on my head."

I suppose the poor boxed-up Jerry was duly released and welcomed on deck, for as the ship rounded the wharf on her outward course the police saw the little man perched on the pilot house making a courtly but exasperating obeisance to them. And then they smote the air with their fists and tore their disheveled locks asunder and ran for a boat to overhaul the Duxbury. But it was of no avail. The good ship was under full sail, and soon left Boston harbor and Bagg's wharf far in her wake. Thus was Jerry bid adieu to his Boston friends in the year 1849.

REASONS WHY

—THE—
REMINGTON FAMILY SEWING MACHINES

Are Superior to All Others.

FIRST—THEIR SIMPLICITY.
The use of them is very easily acquired, and any girl of ordinary intelligence is capable of keeping them in order.

SECOND—THE CONSTRUCTION of the Machine is such that it may be run at a higher rate of speed than any Shuttle Machine now in the market. In factories where the rate of speed has been registered, over

1,000 stitches per Minute have been attained with ease.

THIRD—THEIR DURABILITY
being so strong in all their parts and fitted with great mechanical ability, and being free from the harsh jarring movements and friction so common in inferior machines, they will wear a long time without repair of any kind.

FOURTH—THEIR ADAPTABILITY.
By a simple change of the needle and thread they will sew the finest cambric or the heaviest leather.

FIFTH—THEY HAVE NO ROTARY CAMS,
Cone-wheels or lever-work to make a noise, run hard, or to get out of order.

SIXTH—THEY HAVE AN ADJUSTABLE
Feed which may be raised or lowered at pleasure.

SEVENTH—ALL THEIR MOVEMENTS
are positive and they cannot be thrown out of time.

Manufactured by the Largest Manufacturing company in America, possessing a world-wide reputation in the manufacture of their machines, they afford a guarantee of perfection in work and construction.

No other sewing machine has ever been introduced so quickly and met with such rapid sale as this.

REMINGTON

It arouses the jealousy, opposition and persistent misrepresentation of the older Sewing Machine Companies through their agents, and even the singular circumstance that their agents devote the largest part of their advertisements to show that it is not an improved Singer, and that its calculations are upon a false basis.

"With malice toward none and charity for all," it will be the aim of the agent of the

Remington Sewing Machine
to afford to all an opportunity of testing merits with those of any other, and let them make their own selection.
